"Mademoisello." and this officer, "I am charged by the King, my master, to escort you to the Military Hospital, where you will be cared of your cold in a few days." On hearing this the singer turned pale, and said to the officer, "You are surely jesting, sir!" "A King's officer never jest." reforted the side-de-camp. At a sign from their superior, the four dragoons stepped forward, seized the lady as gently as was compatible with the act, and carried her out to a carriage which was waiting at the door, and placed her inside. After this the officer entered the carriage and took his place beside the lady. "To the hospital!" he ories to the coachman, in a loud voice, and the carriage drove away, escorted by the dragoons, who had remounted their horses. After a few moment's silence the lady exclaimed, "An instant! I think I feel a little better." "The King wishes you to be quite well, and that you should sing your part this very avoning, said the officer. "I will try," murmured the prisoner. During the past week there have been several deaths of notable people in Melbourne, to wit, of Castieau, lately inspector of penal satablishments; of Cosgrave, the city treasurer; and of Nicholas, superintendent of police. None of them were old men, only a little over 50, all of them of an age when it is not unreasonable to look for a score of years of the quiet comfort of declining years. Each of them was well known and well liked, but they had all coased actively to exercise the duties of the offices with which they had so long been connected. Castieau, indeed, had retired from the service, and Coograve was known to be unlikely ever to resume his work. And touching his office, there will be many aspirants for the succession: for although its duties were the opposite of a sincours, they were well remunerated, so that at this mement if the corporation were to advertise for a treasurer there would be at least athousand applicants. But they will not advertise. When Coegrave was appointed he was an alderman, and he gave up his east in the council to take the salaried office. If there is no alderman at present ambitious of being the cash-keeper of the council, it will be given to the next in essicrity in the department, and the shousand eligible sepirants for the honour will severally mourn the bed tasts of the Mayor and the town clerk in not being able to discover where they could have been so much better suited. Dr. Davy is dead, too, and although he did not live in Melbourne, he had enddenly become so well known that his notability seems to belong to the day that a deputation went to the Treasurer to ask him for £500 for Dr. Davy, so as to render the few little inland town where he died. It was only the other day that a deputation went to the Treasurer to sak him for £500 for Dr. Davy, so as to render the few remaining years of his life comfortable. The Government refused the application, but if they had forecess the early termination of the poor old man's life, they might have obtained a little cheap popularity by promising to put it on the Estimates. Dr. Davy is only another instance out of many is which an investorget no benefit out of his discoveries. Moreover, he is an instance also of the number of distinguished persons we have among us of whom ye knew nothing. Until Mr. Ellery, the president of he Royal Society, discovered that the man who d

be made to found a college of some kind—unix snown, in fact, to swear by. The working man, as I long ago declared, does not desire any college. His life consists in learning as little as possible; in working no more than he can help; and in getting paid at the highest rate for the lowest services. Mr. Ormond's generous offer ought to have roused the operatives of this colony into a grand enthusiasm. It gave them a chance which will certainly near happen to them again. But it served as the test of their intellectual energy, and their desire for improvement, and it has shown that, whatever the working man of Victoris may become in the future, he has not yet smand; pated himself from the trammels of his class, and that his capacity to rise out of himself as he has hitherto been is not yet developed.

mastam towards the association. Some speakers were in favour of standing by the rules which had been adopted; others complained of the low wages which were paid in the colony as compared with Victoria and New Zealand; and a member stated that the masters had done nothing until the rules had been put in force.

Eventually a resolution to the effect "That it is desirable that the rules shall be re-opened, in order that they may be further sunsided," was carried.

Several of the rules were then considered and amonded,
after which it was resolved that their further consideration should stand over until nost Saturday night.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

painteen lever now endemn in those two inlands, which latter disease itself is very often a fatel one. I do not know whether deaths have taken place in Nounes lately; but I should think if such has been the case that the dengue was not the direct cause.

To conclude with a few remarks on the nature of the disease and the possibility of an epidemic affecting this country. I may say that the desgue originally imported from india has not been known to exist outside of Réunian, the Manritus, the Seyhelies, and New Caledonia, which islands contain a very mixed population, the Hindoo race being numerously represented in all of them. The fover appeared first in the two former islands, and lately in New Caledonia, in the height of unprecedented dry summer searons but, once established, it became a permanent resident in the first two countries. From its rheumatic character, I should imagine that the cause of the dengue lies in most instances in the fact that in summer the inhabitants of tropical countries generally aleay with doors and windows open, and in houses almost resting on the ground, and having only a ground floor. In the early part of the morning the evaporations from the heated soil cause everywhere a disagreeable dampness, and the body which has suffered during the surply part of the night from an excess of perspiration becomes easily chilled; hence rheumatism in all its forma, of which the dengue is a very acute and a most paintul one.

I fancy that the climate of Sydney is not favourable to the development of an epidemic of that disease. The population are in purely a European one, and the atmospheric conditions are widely different from those which obtain in tropical countries. If we are visited by the dengue, however, it may take the form of an epidemic, but the effects, and it would certainly deappear with the advent of the cold season. The medical suthorities here are probably well supplied with information with regard to this disease, and can be independent and the sufference of the few would be just WEDNESDAY. Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT, there is a serious error; for the manifesto declares in un-mistakable fashion that Mr. GLADSTONE and Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT have expressed their convictions that full local option was the right, and must some day be the privilege, of the people of England. As a matter of fact, neither Mr. GLADSTONE RRISDANK AND NORTHERN PORTS, by the Hesketh (s.) 1 p.m. MERIMBULA AND EDRN, by the Kameruka (s.) ... 5 p.m. nor Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT has supported local option in the sense in which its promoters use local option was an essential of local govern-ment;" Sir William Harcourt, "that local authority should have complete control over the drink traffic." It is important to note these terms "local government" and "local authority," because in them lies the bone of contention between the opponents of local option and professed local-optionists. M. BRUCE, Plancy O., ORGAN, AND MUSIC Widely diffused, or confined within too narrow limits. There is a strong and logical objection to placing any power of direct legislation in the hands of mere gathers in good of the people. It is contrary to the aspirit of representative institutions; it is the beginning of a departure from a chosen and well-proved plan of government which might ware and the proved plan of government which might ware and the proved plan of government which might ware and the proved plan of government which might ware and the plancy of the proved plan of government which might lead to unwelcome as unforeseen results.

Admit the direct vote of the people in the matter of the drink traffic, and how should it be reasonably refused in other matters? Grant the people power to protect in this direct manner their own morality, and how shall you deny their claim to protect in similar fashion their own sentiments upon such questions as capital punishment? Admit the right and reason of the plebiscite, in short -for local option, as understood here, is the plebiscite—and where shall you stop? The system is subversive of representative go-

The principle of British legislation, and of Australian as founded thereon, is that power shall be vested in those chosen of the people, or in those appointed by the chosen. We believe that the best and ablest rulers may so be obtained, at least we know that it may so be obtained-at least we know that it is the fault of the electors if they are not obtained—but when once appointed they constitute the general, the central, and the local authority, and to set up any power apart from them is to act against the spirit of the Constitution.

It is possible, however, that the desire for the underlying principle of local option first grew from abuse of the power vested in locaor central authority. It was felt that in-fluences other than the welfare and wants of the community were effective in dealing with the applications for licenses, and thus a feeling of revolt arose, and by degrees became MAGNESIA

MAGNES raged common-sense of the community might protest against the action of magistrate or judge, or, if the cause of wrong lay with the law, might appeal for an amendment of the law, but would hardly say "Lee us make the law or we will ourselves be advocates with the view of procuring the probibition of the sale of drink in certain localities where the majority may desire to prohibit it. But the minorities in these localities have their rights as well as the majorities, and if these rights are to be taken away at all, it should be by the direct authority of Parliamentary law. If the sale of drink is a thing to be prohibited anywhere in the colony, it should be prohibited throughout the colony by statute. That is the end which the local optionists, who are prohibitionists in disguise, should aim at, or admit that they are aiming at. When they succeed in pro-curing a l'arliament that will pass such a law, they will obtain in a constitutional way what they have so much at heart, the full exercise of the pe then the rights of minorities as well as of majorities in arbitrarily defined districts should be upheld. great lesson for all earnest tempera reformers in the fact that, despite all the pledges of abstinence, the compulsory closings, and the frequent crusades that mighs be expected to strike to the very heart of the trade, the regular consumption goes on unim-peded, and in no large sanse lessened. Does it not point to a great and general want-a universal craving—and would it not be a more profitable task to search philosophically for the cause of that craving, and to endeavour bring the Local Option question forward, and a good many people are just now busily engaged in so preparing the way that it may be brought forward with success. The manito promote healthy self-control, instead of fighting against nature by processes of legal Debates in the Imperial Parliament on the naval armament of England were certain to provoke discussion on the complemen-tary subject of artillery. The duel between iron ships and heavy ord-nance began twenty-five years ago. Local option under the present law goes to the regulation of the liquor trade. Local option as desired by its advocates would provide for its prohibition. Local option as understood by its zealous promoters means power in the hands of the people in any district—the whole body of the people, women as well as men, extremists say, though the majority fix the limit at electors—to decide by a direct vote as to the licensing of any and in the next year they recovered, and invented iron ships which could resist any known cannon-ball. The advocates of land a heavier income tax. Through all the by a direct vote as to the licensing of any public-house for the sale of intexticating liquors in any district. The advocates of local option hope always that the power of prohibition once possessed would be invariably used. They regard drink as more permicious than ignorance. And perhaps we may sak, on parenthèse, if it is so, why not advocate general legislation for the suppression of the drink traffic, direct and uncompromising as that for the suppression of ignorance? The answer may be that the Local Option League moves line upon line, hoping to reach absolute prohibition some day. If so, we can only desire that each line shall be well and truly drawn, that no misleading course shall be made drawn, that no misleading course shall be made to the character of English artillery attention to the character of English artillery attention to the character of English artillery the moment an advance is projected as to the armament of ships.

wicket answered well. The English team played the same as usual, and the twenty-two made a very good stand, being all out for 114 rans. Cunningham and Ramsay played well, the former batting most spiritedly and never giving a chance. Strickland made 18 runs by stubborn play, Byrne 16; and Sheridan for 12 acquitted himself well, the veteran's success being very gratifying to the public. Peel and Flowers bowled admirably, but Ulystt could not stand on the concrete wicket. Hunter's wicket-keeping created very favourable comment. The match is creating great interest, and as Monday will be a public holiday, a large attendance may be anticipated. The English team will leave here for Maryborough on Tuesday evening. with their corrugations of creeks and gullies, and with the heaviledge that the watershed extended for many miles, would certainly say that they were not large enough; but against that could be urged the fact that in previous heavy floods, though not so heavy as the one under notice, they had met all demands and remained univilved. On this occasion, however, there was another factor which did not count in the floods of previous years. Several miles above the scene of the catastrophe were five dams, some on Mr. Mclintock's property, and some belonging to the Mesers. Miller. The capacity of these dams taken together was very great, and the heavy rain filled each one of them. The top one not proving equal to the pressure, burst, the waters rolling down the slope to the second dam, which also gave way, sonding the accumulated waters like a bolt against the other dams, none of which were able to withstand the impact; and the contents of sil these combined went rolling down Salt Clsy Creek like a tidal wave, carrying everything before it. Such is the generally accepted theory in the neighbourhood of the diseaser. The water had never before been known to rise over the sembankment, but on this wife and family, and a HANDICAF STEEPLECHASE. not know that I had let the question of the division of runs in the full from my observation. So far from that I thought I had fairly "de-vod" your readers with it, reiterating assyste and nestseam.

But if I have neglected the point in question, I will take it up as presented in to-day's letter by my friend.

In the first place, are there 4000 runs, or rather stations, in New South Wales to divide! I coubt it. In the western division, measuring 90 millions of scree, stational wearing nearly 500,000 acres, excepting the district of the Warrego, which measures 5 million acres, and contained two years ago 51 separate holdings. I here cannot well be more than 300 leasehold properties in the 90 millions of sores. The remainder of the country under passorial had been seen to be million acres, available. Riverina proper, the country between the Lachian and the Murray from Hay up to Warga, and from Deniliquin to Albany, probably contains 200 stations, perhaps not so many. In the parallel of Waggs, and running north-east right to the Queensland boundary, there are a great many small and moderate-sized stations, but probably 700 will cover the whole number in this part of the central division. In the 19 old countes, there have any stations at all. In the other coast counties, there are a few large cattle stations like Yugilbar, and a fragment of a station here and there in Monarc, On the whole I think 1200 or 1300 will cover the number of stations to be divided. It will be easier to divide 1300 stations than 4000, but still it will be more than Mr. Farnell and Mr. Oliver will ever be able to do if they stick to it for ten years. But if could be done in this way:—Let the chairman of the land boards deal with them on the spot, and send in a report to the limiter. The great majority of the stations to be divided will be ensure to divide 1300 stations than 4000, but still it will be more than Mr. Farnell and Mr. Oliver will ever be able to do if they stick to it for ten years. But if could be done in this way.—Let the chair presons with a stary current about the "divisions," by-the-bye. A station plan was the other day submitted to a dis-tinguished administrator. He glanced blandly over it. "The very best and fairest division I have seen yet!" All the surface available for settlement was about 300 acres of sorub. This, I believe, is not only true, but highly suggestive.

Merris and Ranken, in their "nearly forgotten" report,
Merris and Ranken, in their "nearly forgotten" report, provided 20 station maps to filustrate a danger that neither the Government, the Parliament, nor the people of New South Wales have yet opened their eyes to.

It will be understood some day,
GEORGE RANKEN.

It obtained the Gold Medal at the New Zealand Exhibition and the silver Medal at the Earth Exhibition.

IT IS IN EVERY RILLEGAM Exhibition and he Silver Medal at the Port Exhibition. It gives the finish to every dieh, for gravies, soups, same, fish, or cold mest. It assists digestion, and increases the appetite. It has a place at Government House, and is seen at every respectable artisan's. The protectionists use it because it is colonial, the free-trader because it is sheap. It is the especial favourite with all chasses because, as one of the Sydney elegymen wrote, "It is the best yet made." It is the heat yet made." It is the best yet made."
